

FALL BEST FANTASY SHOWS

The expanding global interest in art has led to more and more shows each year, making this year's offering of not-to-be-missed gallery exhibitions especially selective. What follows is a curated sampling of the most compelling art to be seen this fall worldwide. We hope you'll use it as a point of departure, a launching pad for your aesthetic explorations.

Devin Troy Strother
Ohhh, that's just my gurrl
Sha'luanda, 2012.
 Acrylic and auto-body
 paint on aluminum,
 26 x 92 x 11 in.

“Hopefully in art I can blend together two cultures more successfully than Jay-Z and Marina Abramović did. I’d like to think that the work for my fall show at Richard Heller Gallery is: Chief Keef meets Rosalind Krauss, and they have a baby.”

—DEVIN TROY STROTHER

“‘The World Stage: Jamaica’ is the seventh platform within a series of projects that explore portrait painting in the context of the broader evolution of global pop culture. I chose models through a street casting process in the neighborhood of Trench Town in Kingston, Jamaica, as well as the dance halls and clubs throughout the city. The works investigate the rhetorical strengths of 18th- and 19th-century British portraiture and draw a distinct line of cultural and economic lineage between the United Kingdom and Jamaica. ‘The World Stage: Jamaica’ seeks to provoke the viewer to reassess the visual vocabulary of the portrait and the depiction of black and brown people globally.”
